

Sulitest at Satbayev University

What is Sulitest

Sulitest is an international initiative and platform aimed at advancing knowledge in the field of sustainable development. Its key tool is TASK (The Assessment of Sustainability Knowledge), a standardized online test designed to assess sustainability literacy. The test is available in three languages: English, French, and Spanish.

Why Satbayev University participates

Participation in Sulitest allows Satbayev University to systematically advance its educational agenda in sustainable development, assess participants' level of knowledge, and track results over time. For the university, it is a tool that helps strengthen academic content, confirm educational impact, and demonstrate a practical contribution to the development of sustainability competencies.

Who takes the test

At Satbayev University, the test is taken by students and members of the academic staff. This makes it possible to assess the level of knowledge in sustainable development both among learners and within the university's academic community.

How it relates to ESG, SDG, and ESD

Participation in Sulitest is directly linked to the SDG, ESG, and ESD agenda. The UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) provide the international framework for sustainable development, ESG reflects the environmental, social, and governance dimensions of modern institutional and corporate practice, and ESD (Education for Sustainable Development) focuses on developing the knowledge, skills, and values needed for a sustainable future. Sulitest helps the university assess the extent to which this knowledge is actually being developed within the educational environment.
